

Food Pantries

Pantries provide food to the general public on an ongoing basis. Pantries may limit the number of times they recipient in a given time period. All pantries strive to provide balanced food bags that include all food groups food is nonperishable, i.e. canned goods & dried beans, pasta & rice. Some pantries provide three day supplies people in crisis situations put together according to a suggested menu & based on family size. Other pantries perishable foods such as produce, dairy & bread & include a limited number of nonperishable items.

Most agencies require some form of identification from recipients & each person in their household. Food Pantries require recipients to call ahead for an appointment. A small number of pantries ask people to get a referral from an agency. Please share the information about pantry requirements included with the pantry description with those who are helping.
